Rural Outsourcing Delivers Record Results in Duluth, Minnesota

Duluth, Minnesota - May 14, 2009 – Saturn Systems Software Engineering has reported record results for 2008 with its Rural Outsourcing business model. Financial results for 2008 show a 25% increase in revenue which is consistent with Saturn's growth pattern over the past three years. Equally strong first quarter results for 2009 indicate another record year is in the making. Saturn Systems, a provider of custom enterprise solutions and device control software, is seeing consistent growth in companies searching for lower cost, onshore resources to provide custom software solutions.

CEO Jim Gustafson remarked, "Results like this during an economic downturn are proof positive that the rural outsourcing model works and may indicate that outsourcing patterns are changing."

Rural outsourcing, also known as onshoring or domestic outsourcing, is a growing trend in the Information Technology industry. Tools and infrastructure for working over distance have improved dramatically in recent years, making the location of IT workers less relevant. Lower costs, better communications and ease of management have made rural outsourcing an attractive alternative over metro and offshore services.
